Discussion Items
4	Oregon Household Activity Survey	Karl Welzenbach
Background	Roughly every ten years the state of Oregon, through a consortium—which includes ODOT-TPAU, Portland Metro, and all the other MPOs—develop and distribute a Household Activity Survey. This survey is the best method to collect pertinent data for populating the transportation models that MPOs, ODOT, local communities, and consulting firms use to assess the transportation impacts of population and employment growth in the Rogue Valley. The pertinent data includes: number of households, household size, number of vehicles, number of drivers, household income, types of trips being made, etc.
